

Summer FUN, AND LEARNING!

We're all looking forward to summer break. Your student has worked hard this year, and you should be proud of all they've learned. While summer should provide your student with time to relax and unwind, it's important that they also continue to engage in fun learning activities so they don't lose the skills and knowledge they've gained.

Games are a great tool for summer learning that won't feel like school work. I encourage you to check out the free online games at iCivics.org. Your student has played some of the games this year in class, but there are more than 20 to choose from. All the games have been designed to help students put their civics and history knowledge into play.

iCivics games can be played on a computer or tablet, so even if you're on the go this summer, your student can be learning.

Thank you for the opportunity to teach your child. It's been a privilege.
I wish you a happy and safe summer!

THE PLACE FOR FUN SUMMER LEARNING GAMES
www.icivics.org/games

